Does The World Ahead 2025 Cover Reveal Elites' Potential Plans for Humanity?

Sixbert SANGWA • November 22, 2024

The Economist Group releases an annual publication with predictions for the upcoming year. On November 21, 2024, they published "The World Ahead 2025." Like previous editions, the magazine's cover features a meticulously crafted collage where each visual element carries deliberate significance in forecasting the global elite's agenda. Nothing on these covers is placed by chance - every symbol, image, and their relative positioning conveys specific meanings and intentions. While some may view these covers simply as artistic representations of geopolitical and economic predictions, discerning eyes recognize the purposeful symbolic language at work.

The Economist Group, which publishes the magazine, is partly owned by the Rothschild family, a name synonymous with wealth, power, and conspiracy theories surrounding global influence. Critics argue that the Rothschilds, as part of a global elite, use platforms like The Economist to telegraph plans and exert influence. This concept aligns with what some call "revelation of the method," a supposed occult principle requiring elites to disclose their plans to the masses—albeit cryptically—before acting on them. Through Christian discernment, we can examine these carefully chosen symbols and designs to understand their potential significance for current events and biblical prophecy. This analysis will examine "The World Ahead 2025" from a biblical perspective, exploring how contemporary developments in politics, economics, and technology might connect to scriptural wisdom and end-time prophecies.

At the top of the cover is an image of Saturn, which is not merely a celestial body but a deliberately chosen occult symbol representing Satan. In ancient mythology and modern occult practices, Saturn has been directly associated with Satan - both represent darkness, control, and opposition to God's divine order. This symbolism is explicit and intentional, not metaphorical. Its prominent placement above all other elements on the 2025 cover, including world leaders and global systems, suggests Satan's dominion over worldly affairs. This hierarchical positioning suggests a concerning prediction of humanity's further departure from biblical values and Christian faith, potentially signaling a broader spiritual crisis or planned mass rejection of God's authority in the coming year.

The influence of Saturn symbolism (or Satanism) is evident throughout popular culture, particularly among celebrities who openly display Saturn-related imagery. Notable examples include Beyoncé wearing Saturn earrings in Vogue magazine, Adele getting a Saturn tattoo on her forearm on her 33rd birthday, Miley Cyrus incorporating Saturn imagery in body art, Kesha displaying a Saturn tattoo on her palm, and Katy Perry bearing Saturn-themed body art. These displays align with what the Bible warns about in 2 Corinthians 4:4 regarding "the god of this world" and the nature of idolatry and rebellion. Could this imagery hint at the blurring lines between faith and political devotion in 2025?

The all-seeing eye—a recurring symbol in Illuminati and Freemasonry—appears prominently among the visual elements. This symbol, traditionally associated with occult practices, represents surveillance, control, and submission to Luciferian authority. In the context of 2025, it may point to the increasing role of artificial intelligence, global surveillance, and digital identification systems. The Bible cautions against such systems, particularly regarding end-times governance and the "mark of the beast" (Revelation 13:16-17). This imagery suggests an impending expansion of technological control over society.

Surprisingly, next to the all-seeing eye stands an hourglass, symbolizing the urgency of unfolding events. Time is running out—both physically and spiritually. The Bible consistently reminds us of the fleeting nature of this world. In Ephesians 5:16, believers are called to redeem the time because the days are evil. This symbol serves as a call to action, urging believers to remain vigilant, steadfast in prayer, and anchored in the Word of God as global events accelerate toward the prophesied return of Christ.

As we observe the cover, Donald Trump, centrally featured below Saturn, is surrounded by imagery that invites interpretation. To the untrained eye, it's a political portrait. To others, it symbolizes his dual role in global chaos and consolidation of power. Along with Trump, other key political figures—Putin, Zelensky, and Xi Jinping—appear to be positioned as central players in upcoming global chaos. For example, next to Trump appears a missile, and on the other side, just above an electric car, is an atomic bomb symbol—likely alluding to a potential third world war.

The cover also features imagery suggesting economic turbulence, with symbols indicating dramatic market volatility and rising prices. This visualization of economic instability aligns with biblical warnings about economic uncertainty in the end times. Such economic volatility could be deliberately engineered to facilitate the transition to a new financial system, potentially including central bank digital currencies (CBDCs). Scripture warns us about economic manipulation and control in Revelation 13:16-17, where no one can buy or sell without conforming to the system. These market symbols might be telegraphing planned economic disruptions designed to make populations more accepting of a controlled digital economy.

The appearance of Jane Austen's image is particularly significant, as she is widely recognized as a precursor to modern feminist movements through her novels that challenged societal norms and advocated for women's autonomy. Her inclusion on the cover may forecast another significant wave of feminist ideology in 2025. Historically, feminism has played a role in dividing men and women, weakening traditional family structures, and, indirectly, contributing to depopulation—a key agenda item for global elites. The Bible emphasizes unity in relationships, declaring in Genesis 2:24 that "a man shall leave his father and mother and be united to his wife." However, the feminist movement often propagates division, encouraging independence at the expense of partnership, which may align with depopulation strategies subtly supported by the elite. The Bible reminds us that such confusion and division are tools of the enemy: "For where there is envy and selfish ambition, there is disorder and every evil practice." (James 3:16)

The image of an electric vehicle symbolizes the elite's agenda masked as environmental concern. While they blame regular citizens for climate issues, evidence suggests weather manipulation through technologies like HAARP (High-frequency Active Auroral Research Program) and chemtrails. The push for electric vehicles, presented under the guise of combating "climate change," and environmental preservation serves as another method of control. These vehicles, equipped with sophisticated tracking systems, enable unprecedented surveillance of movement and travel patterns. This aligns with the global elite's broader strategy of restricting personal freedoms while maintaining control through technological means. As Christians, we must remain vigilant and discerning of these deceptive practices, following Christ's guidance to be "wise as serpents and innocent as doves" (Matthew 10:16).

It's also not by accident there a syringe filled with red liquid stands out somewhere near a missile and below their lucifer's all-seeing eye. It could symbolize a world of engineered pandemics, advancements in biotechnology, microchips, nanorobots, or the rise of "the Internet of Bodies," where humans are integrated with AI through nanotechnology. These advancements may bring convenience but at the cost of privacy and autonomy, aligning humanity with systems of control. This parallels biblical warnings of deception in the last days: "For false messiahs and false prophets will arise and perform great signs and wonders to lead astray, if possible, even the elect." (Matthew 24:24)

On the sides of the cover, two Earth globes appear - one with a red background suggesting socialism and another with a black background representing capitalism. This dual representation may reflect the current global tension between the West's push for a unipolar "one world order" and the East's advocacy for a "multipolar world". However, at the bottom of the cover, a red fist—a symbol historically associated with communism and revolution—represents a concerning shift toward global governance through technological control. This movement, powered by AI-driven systems, digital IDs, and central bank digital currencies (CBDCs), appears to be laying groundwork for unprecedented surveillance and control. The rise of such centralized systems, while presented as progress, threatens individual freedoms and autonomy. This aligns with biblical warnings about global consolidation under a singular authority, culminating in the rise of the Antichrist. As "The whole earth was amazed and followed the beast" (Revelation 13:3), we see similar patterns emerging through the integration of AI governance, digital identity systems, and health-related technologies. The Bible specifically cautions against placing our trust in human systems, stating in Psalm 146:3, "Do not put your trust in princes, in human beings, who cannot save." As these systems of control continue to develop, Christians must remain steadfast in their faith, finding hope and security in Christ alone rather than earthly authorities.

Conclusion:

The 2025 cover of The Economist provides more than just a glimpse into potential future events; it reveals a spiritual battle that echoes biblical prophecy. While we have examined several key symbols in this analysis, readers should note that every single element in this carefully crafted collage carries specific meaning. From the elevation of Saturn (Satan) to the normalization of surveillance, global communism, and the erosion of Christian values, these images - along with numerous other subtle details we haven't even touched upon - convey a deliberate agenda aligned with darkness.
As believers, we are called to discern the times. In Matthew 24:4, Jesus warned, "Watch out that no one deceives you." This is a time to deepen our faith, prioritize prayer, and resist worldly deceptions. While the symbols on this cover may predict trials ahead, they also serve as a reminder that God's ultimate plan prevails. Revelation 22:13 declares, "I am the Alpha and the Omega, the First and the Last, the Beginning and the End." Let this serve as a call to stay spiritually prepared, rooted in Scripture, and committed to sharing the hope of the Gospel in an increasingly dark world. Ephesians 6:12 reminds us: "For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the powers of this dark world and against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms." Let us remain vigilant and faithful, knowing that Christ has already overcome the world.
